What Will Our New Judge Do ? ? ?

IN THE VALLEY OF THE MOON

Well. . . Well. . . Well. . . Somehow we must see to it that technicalities do not triumph over justice. . .

The ruling of a Lodi judge that State highway roadblocks are illegal no doubt has a superficial appeal to many motorists who thoughtlessly resent the slight inconvenience imposed upon them in an effort to save their necks from their own or some other person's carelessness. . . But it has disturbing overtones to anyone who has watched courts on all judicial levels display ever increasing zealousness for the legal technicalities involved in the protection of individual rights. . .

The Lodi case concerned the arrest of a truck driver who was on the road despite a suspended license and defective brakes and horn. . . The defective brakes alone could have caused the death of some motorist, but the judge freed the driver because he claimed the State officers had failed to show a reasonable ground for stopping the truck in the first place. . .

Certainly we must be jealous of our individual rights. . . But in every phase of life we sacrifice some liberty in return for the protection and rewards of living in a democratic society. . .

Thank you,
The Publisher
